1 Your Right You have a right to be involved in decisions affecting you. Participating in the plan can influence decisions and give you the opportunity to recommend issues for the City's consideration.	2 Your Leadership Leadership in our community isn't just for elected officials – take this opportunity to play a leading role in deciding what comes next for Bloomington.	3 Your Early Involvement The Comprehensive Plan sets the framework for long-term City policies and programs. Getting involved early in the planning process is an opportunity to shape long-term policies.	4 Your Inclusion Do you feel like your group has been left out? It's time to change that. Voice your concerns in the planning process and make sure your viewpoint is represented.	5 Your Relations Involvement in the planning process can pave the way for long-term relationships among agencies working for the same cause, and with your local government.
6 Your Future Is Bloomington the home you chose for you and your family's future? Participate in the plan to help make Bloomington the hometown you want it to be.	7 Your Social Network Is Bloomington a good community for young people? Do you plan on living in Bloomington in the future? Why or why not? Let the comprehensive plan be a forum for these discussions.	8 Your Retirement Do you want to enjoy your retirement in this community? Help the plan reflect ways to make Bloomington the best place to retire.	9 Your Business Bloomington businesses are key to our community's prosperity. Your perspective on the City's economic future is vital to the planning process.	10 Your Community Whether you represent yourself, your family, your neighborhood, or a community group, adding your voice makes for a better Bloomington. Engage in the planning process and make it happen.
